Patent Deposits

ATCC is an International Depository Authority (IDA) for patent deposits. ATCC is required to test only viability upon the initial deposit of patent cultures. No further testing is done. Patent strains are made available on behalf of the depositor when the pertinent U.S. patent issues but may not be used to infringe the patent claims. A license may be required, please contact the patent depositor for this information.
ATCC occasionally accessions available patent strains into its general collection. At that time, ATCC will provide an "ATCC" designation to the strain, fully characterize the strain and provide a product sheet with more information for that specific item.

Technical Information

ATCC Technical Services has no technical information on patent deposits. For patent strains you can search the Website of the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office at www.uspto.gov/patft/index.html for the text of the appropriate patent.
